Catalog description:	This is an interdisciplinary program housed in the Division of the Humanities. The program is administered by the German Studies coordinator and the Chair of the Division of Humanities.

The German Studies curriculum includes the language, literature, and culture of German-speaking countries. The courses are designed to promote a global perspective by encouraging students to take a close look at another culture and in this way become aware of both the diversity and similarity among all people. The courses satisfy general education and major/minor requirements and prepare students for graduate study and future careers.

Objectives--In the core courses for the German Studies major, students develop a number of skills in German, including comprehension and speaking, reading and writing, to communicate effectively in German about everyday situations, literature, and culture. On all levels, students gain an awareness of the structure of languages and facility with the German idiom, enabling them to read and write reports and papers. In literature courses, students learn aesthetic appreciation through the interpretation of texts and to organize their thoughts for effective argumentation. Elective courses in German Studies give students an interdisciplinary perspective, complementing the core courses in German with courses in history, art history, architecture, economics, music, film, and other fields relevant to German culture. Study abroad is strongly recommended to increase fluency and proficiency in the German language. The German Studies program prepares its graduates for careers in business, history, political science, medicine, music, art history, psychology, philosophy, theology, and law, among others. Several courses in the natural sciences, if supplemented with readings in German, may also be applied toward the German Studies major.

Study Abroad

In light of today's increasingly interdependent world, the UMM German faculty strongly encourages study abroad in combination with a German Studies major or minor, as the most effective means by which to:

-  improve language abilities
-  broaden academic horizons
-  globalize one's world view
-  expand career opportunities
-  advance cross-cultural and problem-solving skills
-  gain confidence in oneself personally and professionally

Study in Austria and Germany--Students interested in a foreign study experience may spend a semester or a full year in Berlin (Humboldt University), Vienna (Center for Central European Studies), or Freiburg (University of Freiburg) through the Institute of European Studies. Language prerequisites vary for individual programs. Internships are available at all of them. Through the Learning Abroad Center, students may also participate in bilateral exchanges to Austria and Karl Franzens University in Graz and with the University of Salzburg.

Brief summary or overview of reason for proposed new program or rationale for changes: With only one faculty member in German, we can best meet student demand by offering this interdisciplinary major. If the German Studies B.A. is approved, the German B.A. and European Studies B.A. will be discontinued.

Mission, Priorities and Interrelatedness:

The proposed interdisciplinary German Studies major will prepare students to become global citizens who are interculturally competent. German is spoken in Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Belgium, Luxembourg, and Liechtenstein. In many Central European countries, where new economic frontiers are opening, German is spoken as a second language. At a time when educational paradigms are shifting with demographic and economic changes, when the Americas and Asia are defining new trading blocks and economic strategies, the United Europe must not be overlooked as the third significant trading block: Germany has the fourth largest economy in the world. Learning the language, history and culture of Germany from an interdisciplinary perspective will prepare our students to function within the new global reality of the United Europe. Faculty members in various disciplines at UMM are either native speakers of German or highly proficient in the language, so that students in German Studies can do some of their course work with them in German. In interdisciplinary elective courses taught in English, students will profit from faculty expertise in German-related fields. The German Studies major is cost-neutral and with an intentional electives plan offers students the opportunity to design a coherent program relating their study of German language and literature to other areas in the curriculum to widen their cultural perspective. The UMM mission statement seems to advocate more rather than fewer language and culture courses, and UMM, for staffing reasons, already requires fewer second-language courses than does UMTC, despite our liberal arts college status. Particularly in a region heavily populated by descendants of German immigrants, and particularly as the variety of languages offered in high schools and other colleges diminishes, we believe UMM should maintain some commitment to German, recognizing, as with American Indian Studies, where we are and who we serve.

Need and Demand:

We absolutely need to ensure that the introductory sequence, Ger 1001 and Ger 1002, continues to be available. These courses have had strong enrollment; in fall 2009, Ger 1001 had 37 students. In the fall of 2010, with the regular faculty member on sabbatical and a temporary replacement, we more strictly limited enrollment to levels comparable to the other beginning language courses, and Ger 1001 has 26 students (course cap is 25). As of fall 2010, German has 15 majors and 4 minors; one major graduated in spring of 2010. With even a slight increase in faculty teaching German courses, we could offer a more robust language-focused major. With only one faculty member in German, we can best meet student demand by offering this interdisciplinary major. National data shows enrollment in all language courses, including German, rising (see the MLA's report on Enrollments in Languages Other Than English in United States Institutions of Higher Education, Fall 2006). The creation of a German Studies major not only offers new and innovative ways to continue offering German courses and advanced German studies, but also ensures that students who came to UMM expecting to complete a German major or started at UMM and wishing to complete a German major can still do so. German is required for graduate studies in diverse fields like music, history, comparative literature, and the sciences, among others. It is also useful for prospective museum curators and librarians. Some of the most prestigious institutions in the USA now offer German Studies in place of the traditional German major in language and literature. Among them are Vassar College, Cornell University, Stanford, and the University of Texas, as well as the Twin Cities campus of the University of Minnesota. By offering German Studies in its Foreign Language program, UMM will be joining a growing trend in interdisciplinary studies.

Comparative Advantage:

By offering an interdisciplinary approach to the study of German language, literature, and culture, the German Studies major rounds out the core courses with in-depth study of intentionally selected elective courses to form a coherent program which broadens the perspective of the major. Six core courses in German (24 credits) are complemented by four elective courses (16 credits) from related fields: art history, economics, English literature, film, history, linguistics, literary theory, music, philosophy, and science. The advantage over the current German curriculum is that the interdisciplinary components of German Studies will be taught in depth by experts in those areas. The relevance of the new elective courses to German may be in course content, methods of interpretation, or parallel developments in art, music, literature, and film. Students may formulate individual coherent programs of electives to create connections among diverse course offerings at UMM and fields of study related to German. Some of the work in history and art history (readings and papers) in particular may be done in German, with instructors who are highly proficient in German. Elective courses for the German Studies major when taught by a native speaker of German and evaluated as advanced language study can be supplemented with relevant readings in German to equip students with the necessary language skills for internships or professional work in that field. In addition, studying abroad for a semester (four courses of German literature and culture totaling 16 credits) at a German-speaking university will enable students to complete a traditional German major in Literature and Culture. The German Studies program offers students many options for planning their areas of focus or concentration in interrelated fields (see suggested areas of focus below).

Efficiency, Effectiveness, and use of Resources:

In 2003-04, the German discipline had three full-time faculty. With retirements and faculty who left to take other positions since 2007-08, the German major and entire German curriculum has been taught by a single faculty member, achieved in part by teaching overloads every semester, doubling classes (two classes meeting simultaneously) and rotating upper division courses as needed. The number and variety of classes thus taught is extremely limited, and a student majoring in German will have but one professor's perspectives on the field. The UMM catalogue language regarding majors states: The purpose of the major is to ensure that each student pursues a particular field of knowledge in depth, investigates advanced theories and schools of thought, and becomes competent in using the language and methods of inquiry of the field. It is through such concentrated study that a student begins to master a body of knowledge and comes to understand the nature of expertise in the chosen field, including both its power and its limitations. While one person can provide all of this, such an expectation is unusually high and at odds with other majors on this campus. Since the Division of the Humanities has had no success in arguing for a tenure-track, full-time temporary, or even part-time temporary hire in German--other priorities and budget cuts have interfered--changing the program to German Studies and drawing on other, existing faculty and discipline resources seems the best available option. We do not want to reduce UMM's language offerings at the same time that we have just revised our mission statement to stress global citizenship and intercultural competence among our students, and we firmly believe in the importance of German, especially in a part of the country so heavily populated by people of German ancestry.

Program Quality and Assessment:

The faculty teaching German Studies will assess the goals and objectives of the German language, literature, and culture components, as indicated in the existing German assessment plans for the core courses. In the core courses for the German Studies major, students develop a number of skills in German, including comprehension and speaking, reading and writing, to communicate effectively in German about everyday situations, literature, and culture. On all levels, students gain an awareness of the structure of languages and facility with the German idiom, enabling them to read and write reports and papers. In literature courses, students learn aesthetic appreciation through the interpretation of texts and to organize their thoughts for effective argumentation. The interdisciplinary courses will be assessed chiefly toward the end of the major. Senior projects may be arranged jointly with faculty in German Studies and faculty in related fields to assess the level of accomplishment of students involved in their chosen area of focus, or they may be completed within the second major field. If students choose to write papers in German in related courses with German-speaking faculty, a portfolio of student work will be submitted to the advisor in German Studies (with permission of the course instructor) to evaluate progress made in German language acquisition. If students choose to pursue all their course work in English, a portfolio of their papers will be submitted (with permission of the course instructor) to evaluate the relevance of their work to German ideas or artistic and intellectual movements.

Program Development:

This program was developed in consultation with faculty in the German and in the elective disciplines, and a steering committee has been created from the same groups. That committee will help review and guide the program, and any curricular changes will go through it and then through the Humanities Division and subsequent regular processes of curriculum approval.

How many semesters of a second language are required?	2 semester(s)
Specific language(s) required	Specific Second Language(s) German
Other requirements, if applicable:	Selection of electives must be intentional and done in close consultation with a German Studies adviser. Students must submit an elective plan (preferably by the end of sophomore year), to be reviewed and approved by the German Studies coordinator and the Chair of the Division of the Humanities. Elective plans must be designed to ensure that there is sufficient depth of coverage in the chosen German Studies electives. For many students, a double-major (or minor) in a closely related disciplinary major is desirable. For some majors, electives can be selected in such a way that many of the courses in a coherent German Studies elective plan also count toward the second major. An advising sheet for recommended course combinations and areas of focus will be available to students and faculty involved. In addition to the requirements for the major, students are encouraged to complete at least one year of instruction in another foreign language. No grades below C- are allowed. Courses may not be taken S-N unless offered S-N only.

A minimum GPA of 2.00 is required in the major to graduate. The GPA includes all, and only, University of Minnesota coursework. Grades of "F" are included in GPA calculation until they are replaced.

The number and variety of classes thus taught is extremely limited, and a student majoring in German will have but one professor's perspectives on the field. The UMM catalogue language regarding majors states: The purpose of the major is to ensure that each student pursues a particular field of knowledge in depth, investigates advanced theories and schools of thought, and becomes competent in using the language and methods of inquiry of the field. It is through such concentrated study that a student begins to master a body of knowledge and comes to understand the nature of expertise in the chosen field, including both its power and its limitations. While one person can provide all of this, such an expectation is unusually high and at odds with other majors on this campus. Since the Division of the Humanities has had no success in arguing for a tenure-track, full-time temporary, or even part-time temporary hire in German--other priorities and budget cuts have interfered--changing the program to German Studies and drawing on other, existing faculty and discipline resources seems the best available option. We do not want to reduce UMM's language offerings at the same time that we have just revised our mission statement to stress global citizenship and intercultural competence among our students, and we firmly believe in the importance of German, especially in a part of the country so heavily populated by people of German ancestry.

Program Quality and Assessment:

The faculty teaching German Studies will assess the goals and objectives of the German language, literature, and culture components, as indicated in the existing German assessment plans for the core courses. In the core courses for the German Studies major, students develop a number of skills in German, including comprehension and speaking, reading and writing, to communicate effectively in German about everyday situations, literature, and culture. On all levels, students gain an awareness of the structure of languages and facility with the German idiom, enabling them to read and write reports and papers. In literature courses, students learn aesthetic appreciation through the interpretation of texts and to organize their thoughts for effective argumentation. The interdisciplinary courses will be assessed chiefly toward the end of the major. Senior projects may be arranged jointly with faculty in German Studies and faculty in related fields to assess the level of accomplishment of students involved in their chosen area of focus, or they may be completed within the second major field. If students choose to write papers in German in related courses with German-speaking faculty, a portfolio of student work will be submitted to the advisor in German Studies (with permission of the course instructor) to evaluate progress made in German language acquisition. If students choose to pursue all their course work in English, a portfolio of their papers will be submitted (with permission of the course instructor) to evaluate the relevance of their work to German ideas or artistic and intellectual movements.

Program Development:

This program was developed in consultation with faculty in the German and in the elective disciplines, and a steering committee has been created from the same groups. That committee will help review and guide the program, and any curricular changes will go through it and then through the Humanities Division and subsequent regular processes of curriculum approval.

Rationale for Changes or Exceptions:	New: WE AIM TO RAISE STUDENT AND ADVISOR AWARENESS OF THE IMPORTANCE OF A COMPLETE PORTFOLIO AS PART OF THE REQUIREMENTS FOR THE SUCCESSFUL COMPLETION OF STUDENTS' SENIOR PROJECTS. DETAILS ON A SUCCESSFUL PORTFOLIO HAVE BEEN OUTLINED IN THE MUSIC DISCIPLINE HANDBOOK INFORMATION, TO BE FOUND ONLINE ON THE MUSIC DISCIPLINE HOMEPAGE, AND THE PORTFOLIO REQUIREMENT IS OUTLINED IN THE COURSE SYLLABUS. HOWEVER, IT APPEARS THAT THE CURRENT COURSE TITLE UNINTENTIONALLY UNDER-EMPHASIZES THE PORTFOLIO REQUIREMENT - WE HOPE TO CORRECT THAT SITUATION AND INCREASE THE CLARITY OF OUR COURSE TITLE WITH THIS CHANGE. Rationale for Changes or Exceptions:	New: DURING A REVIEW PROCESS FOR STUDY-ABROAD COURSES, IT WAS POINTED OUT TO US THAT THE PREVIOUS TITLE OF THE COURSE "SCOTTISH ENLIGHTENMENT: TEXTS AND CONTEXTS" MIGHT NOT BE ATTRACTIVE ENOUGH TO DRAW INTEREST FROM A RANGE OF STUDENTS FROM ACROSS THE DISCIPLINES. WE CAME UP WITH THE NEW TITLE BECAUSE IT MAKES IT MORE EXPLICIT HOW THE TOPICS OF THE COURSE WOULD APPEAL TO STUDENTS FROM ECONOMICS, POLITICAL SCIENCE, PSYCHOLOGY, ETC. EVERYTHING ELSE ABOUT THE COURSE WILL REMAIN THE SAME. IT IS PURELY A MATTER OF ADVERTISING. Old: THIS COURSE TAKES STUDENTS CHRONOLOGICALLY AND GEOGRAPHICALLY THROUGH SCOTLAND'S INTELLECTUAL FERMENT OF THE 18TH CENTURY. STUDENTS WILL BE EXPOSED TO WORK OF THE PERIOD'S MOST IMPORTANT THINKERS AND TO THE PRACTICAL EXPERIMENTATION THAT ACCOMPANIED THE DEVELOPMENT OF MODERN IDEAS ABOUT CAPITALISM, VICE AND VIRTUE. STUDENTS WILL ALSO HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY TO MEET WITH AND DISCUSS THE WORK OF SEVERAL PROMINENT SCHOLARS OF THE SCOTTISH ENLIGHTENMENT, IN THE UNIVERSITY CITIES WHERE HUME, SMITH, AND OTHERS LIVED AND WORKED. THE COURSE COMBINES PRIMARY SOURCE READINGS IN PHILOSOPHY AND ECONOMICS WITH HISTORICAL READINGS ON THE CONTEXT WITHIN WHICH THOSE PRIMARY SOURCES WERE PRODUCED, ENCOURAGING STUDENTS TO UNDERSTAND THE RELATIONSHIPS AMONG SOCIAL, POLITICAL, AND INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENTS.
