I. Chancellor's Remarks.

Chancellor Johnson gave the following remarks:

I have been chancellor at Morris for the past ten years. One of the things that I have come to value most about this community is that we treat each other with respect; that we are able and willing to listen to each other and to learn from each other even when we disagree; that we recognize that we are all responsible for creating this community in which we have chosen to live. Each of us...responsible. Each of us...accountable--to ourselves and to one another, whether we agree or not.

This project of community creation is one which we all own and it is an on-going, daily effort. It takes work. Some days it takes more work than others. Today is one of those days.

We have just lived through a remarkably hostile and contentious presidential election season. Some of us are elated at the outcome. Others are dismayed. There is virtue in being a "good loser"; there is also virtue in being a "good winner". Neither of these—being a good winner; being a good loser--are particularly easy to achieve. On the winning side, it’s too easy to gloat; to taunt and to bait the loser. On the losing side, it’s too easy to blame; to want to strike out at the winner. Today we can each work on those skills required to win with grace or to lose with grace.

At moments like this, passions run high; tempers flare. And we probably haven’t had enough sleep as we watched the political drama unfold. Today we have an opportunity to think about these issues. Today we have a chance to reflect on our own actions and reactions and to think about what we will do to create and recreate the kind of community in which we have chosen to live.

I have been chancellor at Morris for the past ten years. One of the things that I have to come to value about this place is our clarity of mission and purpose. We have the luxury, (yes it is a luxury), of living and learning in an environment where leaders and leadership can grow. Each one of us needs to think about what this means. Each of us needs to think about the words we use and our own behaviors. Passionate feeling about the things for which we have assumed leadership is a quality of good leadership; of a good leader. But feeling passionate about the things for which we have assumed leadership can sometimes get in the way of compassion; of understanding. Sometimes compassion and understanding are what we need most.

I have been chancellor at Morris for the past ten years, and in just a few weeks that tenure will end. I hope that I can leave this community holding the same respect for it and for all of you that I have come to understand and appreciate over these years. We have the opportunity – more importantly, we have the responsibility and privilege-- to model what it means to create a positive living and learning environment; a welcoming and inclusive community, where freedom of expression is treasured and where all individuals who have chosen to make this their home are valued and included and feel safe. I expect us to come together as a community in this effort.

Thanks for those of you who participated in the system-wide strategic planning visit yesterday. I particularly want to thank Bart Finzel, Brook Miller and Katie Ledermann. I believe Stephen Lehmkuhle and Rebecca Ropers-Huilman left here with a better understanding of our campus. They were impressed with the uniformity and clarity of the understanding of our mission and purpose.”

B. For Information. From the Steering Committee. Common meeting time proposal.

Jon Anderson, Chair of the Steering Committee, presented walked through a PowerPoint outlining the motivation, history, and key features of the common meeting time proposal below. At this time, we are only looking at new proposal 3 and new proposal 5.

There are pros and cons for both.

The pros:
- adds a common meeting time with less disruption than previous proposals
- enables students realistic opportunity to eat during middle of the day
- enables mid-day student, faculty, and staff events and meetings
- other governance activity beyond campus assembly could use this period
The cons:
• 50-60 minutes duration not enough time to conduct campus governance activity
• disrupt faculty eating patterns
• off campus students have empty period before class
• concern that 10 minutes of recovery time is not enough
• food and beverages services likely to experience challenging peak demands
• afternoon science labs use 1 hour to prep for next lab

Proposal variables:
• days of the week
• buffer period between class
• duration of meetings (50 min, 60 min, etc.)
• placement of meeting time during the day

Next steps:
• relevant committees discuss and give feedback to Steering
• individual members give feedback on informal survey form
• expect another report at future assembly meeting

Reactions/comments/suggestions:
- The proposal might mess with the buffers for some 2 credit classes offered on Tuesday and Thursday.
- There’s a large component of staff who have don’t have flexibility when they take lunch. A morning meeting time might work best for staff.
- Suggest that we not rush this process. Assembly could adopt one of the proposals but not implement until next fall.

Chancellor Johnson added that Steering Committee discussed the need to consult with the Registrar’s office and other relevant offices regarding the timeline.

C. Other New Business.

Mary Elizabeth Bezanson reminded assembly members that several years ago Facilities Management installed new paper towel and soap dispensers. An unintended effect is that we are now using 4 non-rechargeable batteries for the paper towel dispensers and 3 non-rechargeable batteries for the soap dispensers—we are going through a lot of batteries. Bryan Herrmann said he would investigate possible solutions.

V. Campus Committee Reports.

Chlene Anderson, co-chair of Faculty and P&A Affairs, reported that subcommittees are working on two main issues right now—workload and the engagement survey. If other committees are dealing with workload efforts, please contact Chlene or Julie Dabbs.

VI. All University Reports.

A. System-wide Strategic Planning update

Bart Finzel reported that as Chancellor Johnson stated earlier, Stephen Lehmkuhle and Rebecca Ropers-Huilman, were on campus yesterday to hold listening sessions. President Kaler charged a system-wide committee to conduct strategic planning for the entire University system, with emphasis upon how each campus fits into the system. A report will be submitted to the Board of Regents to guide system-wide strategic planning. As President Kaler’s charge notes, “The committee should produce a document the Board of Regents and I can use for decision making and to guide faculty members and leaders across the system in identifying and pursuing enhanced opportunities for interactions system-wide.”
On January 10 the committee will synthesize its findings and begin producing a draft report with recommendations. There will be an ‘affirmation’ process in which the report will be circulated for additional feedback and eventually edited. The Board of Regents would like to consider a finalized report for approval in June. Please contact Bart, Brook or Katie by the end of fall semester if you have comments/suggestions.

Other reports:

• Jennifer Goodnough reported that SCEP has been discussing two topics that will eventually come to the Scholastic Committee. The first issue is how we can tie mental health and academics together to be more supportive to students. The second issue is the make up policy for excused absences. Boynton Health is overwhelmed with requests and are not able to handle the requests for verification of absences. The new policy will likely have language stating that for a single absence that does not require a visit to a doctor, requests for verification should be limited. The bar will be set higher for final exams and exam days. You can expect to hear more about this.

• Kristin Lamberty gave the following report from the U Learning Technology Advisors (ULTA) committee. This committee’s purpose is to provide a strong faculty voice to advise in selecting, implementing, and configuring technology used for teaching. An upcoming issue is the potential change from Moodle to Canvas.

First up: Learning management system (LMS) review and recommendation and some interesting figures:

- there are 106,433 users of Moodle
- 15,842 Moodle courses (I don’t know if that includes multiple sections of one course, over time, etc.)
- 12,937 academic courses
- 2,905 non-academic courses

Why wouldn’t we just stay with Moodle?

• Complexity of our systems
• Technical debt (cost of customizations)
• Design limitations for scaling, learning analytics
• Slow to get vendor support for integrations

What can you do to assure me that moving to another LMS won’t be a horrible experience, like last time?

1. If the decision is made to move to a new learning management system, OIT will be guided by consultations with colleges as to the speed of the transition.
2. If the decision is made to move to a new learning management system, Academic Technology - OIT will provide a vast amount of assistance to faculty and college IT staff, in accordance with what they say they need: online resources, drop-in work sessions, individual consultations, extra staff resources.
3. If the decision is made to move to a new learning management system, Canvas has a migration tool that quickly and efficiently moves courses from Moodle to Canvas. The pilot has provided experience with the minimal ‘clean-up’ needed after a course is moved.
4. If the decision is made to move to a new learning management system, Moodle servers with course content will still be available for as long as we need them to be. They don’t need to be turned off at a specific time.

Important dates to be aware of:
Next meeting - December 2
December 16 - LMS review period ends
February 28 - Report of the pilot will be available
March 31 - ULTA makes recommendation
May 1 - LMS decision

VII. Announcements.

1. Update from Chair of the Chancellor Search Committee
Peh Ng, Chair of the Chancellor Search Committee, thanked everyone who participated in the search process during the on campus interviews of the three candidates. The search committee met this week and is in the process of completing the final report and will submit their recommendations to President Kaler in the next few days. We are still on schedule in terms of the timeline and anticipate a public announcement between November 28-December 2.

2. Update on Higher Learning Committee quality initiative

Bart Finzel reminded assembly members that this is the year we will undertake the quality initiative proposal. The first year experience has been floated around and we will need to move forward with this in the next few months. Bart intends to meet with the appropriate governance committees about the quality initiative. Please contact Bart if you have questions/concerns or would like him to meet with your committee.

Additional announcements:

• Chancellor Johnson announced that the UMM women’s soccer team has advanced to the next NCAA level and will play White Water this weekend. And, for the first time in 37 years, the UMM football team won all of its home games this year.

• Adrienne Conley announced that UMM will be hosting the Minnesota OUT! Campus Conference this weekend. We expect over 100+ visitors from over 15 Minnesota colleges. MOCC is a premier opportunity for students, staff, faculty, alumni, and community members from Minnesota, Wisconsin, and the surrounding areas to discuss issues facing lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans, queer, intersex, asexual, and two spirit persons (LGBTQIAS+) on college and university campuses and in the greater community.

VIII. Adjournment.

Meeting adjourned at 5:35 pm.
