I. Open Forum

A. Simon Franco visiting to get feedback on Community of Scholars

Franco works in the Office of Student Activities. The good news is that we do not have a problem with having students come to UMM. The bad news is that we have a hard time retaining them. Community of Scholars is a scholarship competition each year and Admissions wants to show incoming students that UMM students are engaged and doing cool things, showing this to high school seniors means greater retention. Those planning COS want our help to come up with something more engaging for those students to increase retention.

Dice- One of the ways students stay at Morris is student employment, and it would be maybe cool to have employers and student workers talk to students about working while going to school.

Franco- Se have a structured day for the students and we don't want them to get burned out.

Hunt- We should do something to show our commitment to civic engagement and show students that we are not a wait point to the Twin Cities campus but rather a destination.

Bauer- Why are we not doing the activities fair this year?

Franco- It is hard for student organizations to commit to 4 days of activities. Also it's believed that this is not the right setting/mindset for students to look for organizations to join.

Bauer- I can probably name 6 or 7 students from COS who came here from the activities fair. The activities fair in general is chaotic and if it were a more relaxed environment for them to chill and have fun, there would be no stress for a small period of time.

Nelson- We could maybe take the element of tabling out but rather have it be playing games and having snacks with the students (more of a hangout and not recruitment).

Brichacek- It would help to have student leaders involved on campus sit and allow students to come up and ask questions/hang out/learn about more opportunities on campus. We could also have people make poster boards with pictures to actively engage them in a more fun room.

Brown- We could put students in Oyate with student leaders sitting at tables and have students assigned to little groups to hang out with leaders and then do a speed dating type thing where they get to speak to many different people.

Franco- We have to have something in which current students and new students interact that is not intimidating and in a way that allows them to ask questions.

Bias- I didn't like the activities fair because I didn't remember anything and really just wanted a quiet place to hang out and not learn about organizations.

Alieva- We should have a way in which students can hang out and eat snacks.

Relationship building should be one of the primary focuses of this event.

Franco- Snacks seemed to have been not great in the past years at COS.

Dice- I second Bauer's idea. They should put all of us in a room and then allow us to hang out with students.

Franco- Instead of having a set poster, maybe there should just have a white board which allows people to change what they display.

Brown- The activities fair helped some people and then also didn't help others. It would be cool to have participants connect with students about certain topics and also engage with UMM.

Nelson- We should want an opt-in option for an activity so they could do something if they want to but don't have to. We should have a fun activity like bean bags and also have a snack/chill place.

Bauer- I think this should be in Oyate after lunch which would allow a place to sit or do something that would feel fun. We should allow people to exist in the space and do what they want, we could maybe have some music playing and the fire on. We should have parents eat before students and then have the Oyate space after students eat.

Smith- The logistics of this event are not our responsibility and figuring out where to hold the event is not our job.

Alieva- We should have students at the front doors welcoming incoming students.

Franco- I will bring this to Admissions, we will come up with a plan, and then bring the plan back to MCSA for feedback. We will also be relying on MCSA to help with this.

IX. Sustainability Update

Bauer- Stone's Throw is starting study hours every day from 2-5 PM.

Westfield- I had a lot of fun at the movie on Saturday and it was cool to hear about what the high schoolers are doing.

Bauer- Think about what sustainability means to you and then share with somebody near you. The best way sustainability was described is that "it's personal wellness alongside social equity, economic feasibility, and environmental responsibility." If you have a water bottle please drink some water because it's important to sustain yourself. Erika Bailey-Johnson is a Morris alum who founded the sustainability model mentioned above. Now think about a few things you can do this week to sustain yourself. Self care doesn't need to be laziness which can sometimes be harmful if its all you do, self care should be doing stuff to sustain yourself in the future.
