Scholastic Committee
2017-18 Academic Year
February 13, 2018
Meeting Eleven Approved Minutes

Present: Leslie Meek (chair), Jennifer Goodnough, Trey Goodsell, Brenda Boever, Merc Chasman, Alyssa Pirinelli, Ray Schultz, Elsie Wilson, Dan Magner

Absent: Judy Korn, Emma Kloos, Harshita Kalidindi, and Sierra Brown

1. Approve minutes of December 5, 2017, meeting

Minutes approved. Jennifer Goodnough will send the approved addition to the Frequently Asked Questions section of the Grading and Transcripts policy to Stacey Tidball to be added to the policy online.

2. Chair's Report

Merc Chasman has agreed to serve as vice chair of Scholastic Committee and run meetings when Leslie Meek has to be gone.

3. SCEP Report

SCEP discussed trends in international student recruitment. While there's no panic on the Twin Cities campus they are wary because the United States is no longer the only destination students are going. The US has become more inaccessible to international students and there are more schools in other countries willing to accept them. The Twin Cities is wary that their international student population may go down, but they could fill that gap with domestic students. The Morris campus may not be able to fill the gap created by a decline in international students.

SCEP approved the Morris academic calendars

The committee is looking at adding a sentence in the Teaching and Learning: Instructor and Unit Responsibilities policy about informing students how group work will be graded.

SCEP discussed changing the definitions for undergraduate grades to one-word definitions, but decided there was value in the longer definitions and will keep them mostly the same. There was also discussion about uncoupling F and N grades. The confusion is that a grade of D is worthy of credit in the A-F grading system, but is equivalent to an N grade in the S/N grading system. SCEP would like to make it clear that A-F grading is not equivalent to S/N grading.

SCEP is also looking at X and K symbols for continuation courses and courses in progress. Some instructors are using the symbols in place of an I for incompletes. The X symbol should be used for continuation courses where a grade cannot be determined until the full sequence of courses is completed. The K symbol should be used for courses that are still in progress. I symbols should be used for individual students who have not completed coursework in the course. Instructors should also have written contracts with students who are assigned I symbols.

4. Probation/Suspension Report

Probation Report

Suspension Report

The committee reviewed the probation/suspension reports and noted there were no statistics that stood out that could identify a problem. The numbers have been consistent year after year with the same patterns repeating from fall to spring.

The one notable value was the percentage of transfer students on probation. The committee requested more information about the composition of the transfer student population. Are SUFE students counted as transfer students? Was this their first year at Morris? It was noted that the number of transfer students that were suspended was lower than expected when compared to those on probation. Members suggested that the difference between the number of transfer students on probation and those that are suspended could indicate that transfer students have a learning curve adjusting to Morris and may need better advising during orientation. It was noted that orientation has been modified for transfer students. Transfer students have fewer days of orientation with a panel discussion on one of the days. Orientation participation by transfer students has improved with the modified schedule. Brenda Boever will be meeting with the Orientation Taskforce and offered to discuss adding more information about transfer credits and resource information to the orientation schedule.

The committee also noted that fewer women are suspended than men. The committee wondered if there were ways to provide a support system or an intervention for these students.

5. SCEP: Counting credits toward a University degree
<https://policy.umn.edu/education/baccreditreq>

The Morris campus is non-compliant with Credit and Grade Point Requirements for Undergraduate (Baccalaureate) Degree policy. Item number two of the policy states that all credit awarded by the University should be accepted for the 120 credit requirement. Morris does not accept credits toward the 120 credit requirement for courses that do not fit the liberal arts model (ex. pharmacy courses from the Twin Cities campus). The 120 credit requirement is a systemwide degree requirement as stated in item number five of the policy. It is at the discretion of the campus to accept the credit toward general education requirements or major requirements, but the expectation of the policy is that all U of M credits are counted toward the 120 degree requirement.

Morris does accept credit from other U of M campuses and outside institutions for college algebra. Morris's basic college algebra course does not earn credit toward the 120 requirement because the course is lower than college algebra.

Morris can either choose to become compliant with the policy or ask not to be compliant. It is unknown how asking for an exception to this policy will be received. Morris is thought to be the only campus/college not accepting U of M credit toward the 120 requirement.

The reason for accepting all U of M credit for the degree is that each college/campus can protect the integrity of its degree by strengthening its major and general education requirements.

In 2007 there were conversations with Clare Dingley and Dorothy DeJager, but there's been no motion in Campus Assembly to define a liberal arts course. In the past, Morris would not accept Principles of Accounting courses, but then Morris began offering the course and Morris began accepting the course for transfer.

The committee doesn't believe this has been an issue since only a small number of students take courses from other U of M campuses that are not accepted for transfer. There has never been a petition based on counting credits toward the 120 credit requirement.

Goodnough suggested Morris become compliant with the policy because she believes every discipline has well-defined majors and the campus has good general education requirements. Courses that do not meet the liberal arts model do not need to be assigned a general education category.

The committee asked the transfer specialist how to deal with the issue. It was noted that transfer credit is the Scholastic Committee's purview and should be decided by the committee.

Compliance with the policy would require a change in how the Office of the Registrar processes U of M transfer credits and a major change to the degree audit.

Motion: The University of Minnesota Morris become compliant with the Credit and Grade Point Requirements for Undergraduate (Baccalaureate) Degree policy beginning with U of M courses taken summer 2018. Students with unaccepted U of M credits prior to summer 2018 can petition the Scholastic Committee for retroactive change.

The motion was approved unanimously.

The committee asked the transfer specialist to try and find students with prior U of M credit.

Respectfully submitted,

Angie Senger
Office of the Registrar
