Morris receives 10-year reaccreditation from the Higher Learning Commission

Summary: The Higher Learning Commission is an independent corporation of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools.

(December 3, 2010)-The Higher Learning Commission has awarded the University of Minnesota, Morris full 10-year reaccreditation. The University received a formal letter of notification in October following a visit from an evaluation team in March 2010. The University of Minnesota, Morris was first accredited in 1970 and has been reaccredited on a regular 10-year review cycle since that date.

The Higher Learning Commission is an independent corporation of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools, a membership organization in 19 states whose purpose is to provide educational leadership to the region and the country. The responsibility for the accreditation of degree-granting higher education institutions is within the purview of The Higher Learning Commission whose mission statement is “serving the common good by assuring and advancing the quality of higher learning.”

Through personal and academic discovery, the University of Minnesota, Morris provides opportunities for students to grow intellectually, engage in community, experience environmental stewardship and celebrate diversity. A renewable and sustainable educational experience, Morris prepares graduates for careers, for advanced degrees, for lifelong learning, for work world flexibility in the future, and for global citizenship.
