The best, the funniest, the most clever: An Evening of Superlatives

Summary:

(November 5, 2004)-What do a social worker, a basketball coach, a mathematician, a poet, a master gardener and an ensemble have in common....Superlatives! What's a Superlative? For those of you who may be like Garrison Keillor's English majors, it's a word or short phrase that signifies the greatest degree of comparison possible. Which is just what the Briggs Library Associates invite you to celebrate with them on Tuesday, Nov. 9, at 7:30 p.m., for the Third Annual "Evening of Superlatives" at the Rodney A. Briggs Library on the University of Minnesota, Morris campus.

The format for this event is to welcome a number of campus and community presenters to share their personal favorite examples of superlatives of the written and spoken word and music with the rest of us. The selections are never too long but they are the most clever or the funniest, or the most beautiful that you've probably heard in a while. So join us to hear what Laverne Swanson, Dave Roberts, Mary Elizabeth Bezanson, Paul Grove, Nancy Schuman, Henry Fulda, Vicki Graham and other talented individuals think are worthy of superlative status.

The event is free, open to the public, and handicapped accessible. Refreshments will be served. It is presented by the Briggs Library Associates as part of their annual invitation to the Morris community to join in support of Briggs Library, to use its facilities which are open to all, and to take part in a variety of cultural events sponsored by the Associates, the friends' group for the library.
