Dr. Louise Antony opens Midwest Philosophy Colloquium

Summary:

(September 30, 2004)-Dr. Louise Antony, professor of philosophy at Ohio State University, Columbus, will give the Fall Midwest Philosophy Colloquium lecture on Monday, Oct. 11. She will present a campus seminar at 2:30 p.m. in the Alumni Room of Oyate Hall in the UMM Student Center, and an evening lecture at 7 p.m. at First Lutheran Church in Morris.

Dr. Antony is also a faculty in the Women's Studies and Comparative Literature Departments at Ohio State. She earned her doctoral degree in philosophy from Harvard University in 1982 and a bachelor's degree in philosophy from Syracuse University in 1975.

She has taught at Ohio State University since 2000. Before then she taught at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, from 1993 to 2000. Her areas of specialization and competence include the Philosophy of Language, the Philosophy of Mind, Feminist Theory, Epistemology, Metaphysics and the Philosophy of Science.

She has co-edited two books: with Norbert Hornstein, Chomsky and his Critics, Blackwell 2003 and with Charlotte Witt, A Mind of One's Own, Westview Press 1993.

She is the author of many articles appearing in journals and collections, and a frequently invited speaker. Her numerous articles and talks deal with topics in different areas of philosophy such as epistemology, linguistics, political theory and metaphysics.

These lectures are made possible by a grant from the Minnesota Humanities Commission in cooperation with the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Minnesota State Legislature, and the Office of the Vice Chancellor of Academic Affairs and Dean, UMM.

The presentations are free and open to the public.
