The University of Minnesota Morris Center for Small Towns (CST) announces its fall 2019 project portfolio. Each semester CST works with communities around Minnesota to find local solutions to challenges impacting Minnesotans.

Acting as a doorway to the University, CST gives small towns access to the talent and resources at UMN Morris while helping students apply the skills they're learning in the classroom, strengthen their bonds to greater Minnesota, and develop as professionals.

This fall CST is working with 22 students on 16 projects around the state.
