UMM FACULTY MEMBERS TO RECEIVE PhD DEGREES

Two University of Minnesota, Morris faculty members will be among the graduates receiving advanced degrees at the University's fall quarter graduation exercises Thursday evening in Northrop auditorium on the Minneapolis campus.

John Q. Imholte, 108 West Ninth Street, and Milton D. Jacobson, 6 Westwood Acres, will both be awarded the doctor of philosophy degree.

Imholte, lecturer in history at UMM since September, 1960, is a graduate of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Virginia, and received the master of arts degree from the University of Minnesota. His doctoral dissertation explores the role of the First Minnesota Regiment in the Civil War.

Jacobson, who receives his doctoral degree in educational psychology, is assistant professor of engineering graphics and mathematics. A new member of the UMM faculty this fall, he received his bachelor of science and master of arts degrees from the University of Minnesota.
