For Immediate Release

More than 100 men and women settled into a daily routine of class attendance and study this week as the University of Minnesota, Morris began its second annual summer session.

The largest summer enrollment to date was recorded by the time registration was completed. Many of the students were elementary school teachers, taking college courses to apply toward the Bachelor of Science degree now being offered at UMM under a new program for elementary teachers.

Courses are being offered this summer in English, history, psychology, mathematics, humanities, education and sociology. Classes in these areas will meet daily for five weeks through July 20. A special 10-week French course is also being offered.
