MORRIS--About 200 parents attended the afternoon program of the Dad's Day activities at the University of Minnesota, Morris last Saturday. The program was a part of the football "Dad's Day" at UMM.

This year, parents of all UMM students were invited to campus for the special program, as well as the game. The program was designed to acquaint them with the various aspects of college life.

Bruce Rolloff, Director of Physical Education and Athletics; Charles Hanna, Director of Admissions; Iver Bogen, Director of Counseling and Frank Nelson, president of the UMM student government, each presented a brief discussion about their area of activity at UMM.

A 5:30 p.m. pre-game luncheon was followed by an open house in the college residence halls and in the private housing facilities in Morris. Ted Freed, Director of Housing, said yesterday, "There was a fine turnout of parents in the resident halls for the open house."

The parents attending the program were interested in the new Liberal Arts College of the University of Minnesota and asked a number of questions about the development of the University of Minnesota, Morris. Many of them were amazed by the jump in this year's enrollment.
