Accomplishments

Jane Kill, office manager and test center coordinator, Ann Kolden, executive office and administrative specialist, Gail Boe, senior gardener, and Diane Kill, principal office and administrative specialist, traveled to Eastcliff, the official residence of the president of the University of Minnesota, for the annual celebration honoring civil service and bargaining unit employees with 20, 25, 30, 35, 40, 45 and 50 years of service. The Morris vehicle carried 115 years of combined service: J. Kill 35, Kolden 20, Boe 35, and D. Kill 25.

In the News

Matt Privatsky ’11 is at the center of a debate covered by the Washington Post last week. In “Thick coats, thin skins: Why Minnesotans were outraged by a recent Washington Post report,” writer Christopher Ingraham credits Privatsky with instigating the “Indignant Minnesota Twitter” campaign that responded to a recent Post report by “refut[ing] the notion that Minnesota is somehow lacking in beauty of natural amenities.”

The Center for Small Towns (CST) is mentioned in a recent story by KXRA’s Voice of Alexandria. The story discusses a study on the price of produce at farmers markets in west central Minnesota, which was conducted by CST and University of Minnesota Extension staff.

According to the Pope County Tribune, Heather Pennie-Roy ’94 has been inducted into the Minnewaska Laker Hall of Fame.
