2-12-2010

Editor Jay Miskowiec to speak on "Towards a Metaphor of Translation"

University Relations

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.morris.umn.edu/urel_news

Recommended Citation
http://digitalcommons.morris.umn.edu/urel_news/1413

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the External Relations at University of Minnesota Morris Digital Well. It has been accepted for inclusion in University Relations News Archive by an authorized administrator of University of Minnesota Morris Digital Well. For more information, please contact skulann@morris.umn.edu.
Editor Jay Miskowiec to speak on "Towards a Metaphor of Translation"

Summary: The translation editor will share his process of navigating between the literal and the literary.

(February 12, 2010)-Jay Miskowiec, translation editor at Aliform Publishing, an independent publisher that specializes in Latin American and world literature in translation, will visit the University of Minnesota, Morris on Thursday, February 25, 2010, to conduct a translation workshop for students and to provide an evening presentation. The campus and community are invited to attend “Towards a Metaphor of Translation” at 7 p.m. in Humanities Fine Arts room six. A reception follows.

The title of Miskowiec’s presentation comes from an observation he stumbled upon years ago: “translation,” from the Latin trans and latus, and “metaphor,” from the Greek meta and pherein, have the same root meaning—to carry across or beyond.

“Literary translation always rides that uneven knife edge between literal and figurative, or metaphoric, meaning,” reflects Miskowiec. “Of course, any word, in any language, has a specific denotative meaning and the task of the translator is to convey that, but along with the myriad abstract meanings behind it. What I’m going to do in my talk is explain what my own thought process is as I navigate between the literal and the literary. I’ll illustrate the conundrum, but I’ll also discuss the kind of brute labor of reading closely, referring to a wide range of dictionaries, and revising, revising, revising.”

Miskowiec received the first Beca Nacional de Traducción Literaria from the Ministry of Culture of Colombia for his proposal to translate the novel El viaje triunfal by Eduardo García Aguilar. He has received grants from Argentina’s Fundación para la Teoría y Práctica de las Artes, the Ministries of Culture of Brazil, and Mexico’s Consejo Nacional para la Cultura y las Artes.

In addition to his work as a translation editor, Miskowiec teaches English and journalism at Minneapolis Community and Technical College. He received a master of arts and a doctorate in comparative literature from City University of New York, where he studied with esteemed translator Gregory Rabassa. He earned a bachelor of arts in Spanish and English from the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities.

Miskowiec’s campus visit is made possible by a gift from an alumnus donor.

For more information about the event, please contact James Wojtaszek, associate professor of Spanish, at 320-589-6295.
intellectually, engage in community, experience environmental stewardship and celebrate diversity. A renewable and sustainable educational experience, Morris prepares graduates for careers, for advanced degrees, for lifelong learning, for work world flexibility in the future, and for global citizenship. Learn more about Morris at morris.umn.edu or call 888-866-3382.